Regenerative Earth Summit: Soil + Water + Climate

October 29-30, 2019 | Colorado

The third annual Regenerative Earth Summit is poised to support the food, fashion and beauty industries to reimagine sourcing as a path to empower regenerative agriculture to build healthy soils that enhance carbon sequestration and improve water impacts from toxic chemicals, overuse and plastics contamination to address global water challenges.

Drawing on the expertise and insight of NGO and business leaders in the apparel, food and beauty industries, the Summit will provide a context for more cooperative approaches to support producers and enhance market access to products derived from regenerative farming and water conservation efforts in global supply networks.

- Through the Regenerative Slams™ we share solutions underway in each industry sector that demonstrate practices that are scalable and replicable.
- Working sessions provide generative interactions for all participants to explore strategies and collaborative opportunities for greater impact.
- Extended networking provides more chances for ideas to be exchanged and collaboration to flourish for the acceleration of restorative and regenerative business practice.
